Officer Hart spotted two men at the M. P. depot, whom he suspected of having stole an evercost. One of the men bought a ticket to Temple and his partner, it was thought, would attempt to beat his passage. Sure enough when the delayed south bound train in finding place way recovered him. When the train got up to Eleventh street the other man ran out from between mosme box-cars, and attempted to board train. He had a bundle under his arm, and liart thought be had the overcoat. The officer prevented him and strengted to arrest him, and the man bruke to rus; then the engineer stopped the train, and with the officer went affer the man. They ran him several blocks and finally captured him at the turn table. The bundle the man had was clothes, and not the overcoat, and as there was no charge against him. Mr. Hart had to let him go, as he also did his partner. From their actions, it is evident that they have been in mischief somewhere.
